The Future of Textiles is Made in Cambodia

Cambodia's garment, footwear, and travel goods (GFT) industry remains a cornerstone of the national economy, generating nearly US $14 billion in exports in 2024 and accounting for over one-third of GDP. With more than 1.6 million workers employed across over 1,600 factories—including nearly 700,000 women—this sector fuels economic inclusion and growth. As global demand rebounds, Cambodia's textile exports continue to outpace expectations, reflecting the country's rising competitiveness and appeal in the regional supply chain.

Cambodia's Textile Industry: A High-Potential Future

Cambodia is emerging as a high-potential market in Southeast Asia, fueled by steady GDP growth, competitive labor advantages, and strong government support for industrial upgrading. The textile and garment industry alone contributes over US $14 billion in exports and provides employment for more than 1.6 million workers, underscoring its vital role in the global supply chain.

Looking ahead, Cambodia is steadfast in its vision to achieve upper-middle-income status by 2030 and high-income status by 2050. Strategic investments in industrial diversification—spanning textiles, electronics, automotive parts, and processed foods—combined with digital transformation, sustainable manufacturing, and favorable trade frameworks like RCEP, are paving the way for long-term growth. With expanding Special Economic Zones and a resilient industrial ecosystem, Cambodia is positioning itself as an attractive, future-ready destination for international investment.
